(3-5)

Mark: Tomorrow is Saturday. Let's go biking at the beach.
Sam: I don't like to go outside. I hate to feel bugs there flying around me, you know.
Mark: But feeling the wind blowing on the face is great. You can also enjoy the beautiful scenery along the way. Also, we can buy your favorite food, ice cream and roasted bird's eggs at the vendors.
Sam: OK. I'll go with you. But Dad has to work, so he can't drive us there. How can we go there by ourselves?
Mark: Take it easy. We can take the MRT there. It takes only fifteen minutes. Besides, we don't need to take our bikes there. We can rent two at the beach.
Sam: That's really convenient. I can't wait to enjoy the trip!

People love chocolate, but do you know where the chocolate comes from? The country in Western Africa, Ghana, provides more than 70% of cocoa in the world.

To lower the cost, chocolate companies use child workers on the cocoa farms. About 1.8 million children there begin working at a young age. They make money for helping their poor families. Without going to school, they lose the chances to learn. They can't improve their lives.

Finally, more and more reporters see the problem of child labor there. The reporters try to help people know this bitter truth behind sweet chocolate. The more people get to know the truth, the more chances we can make a change.
