Do you know why people call oil “black gold” ? It’s because oil is so useful. We can use it to power our cars or keep our house warm. We can use it to make almost everything in our lives: houses, cars, toys, computers, shoes, and clothing.

Because oil is so useful, governments are always worried about the price of it. Usually, supply and demand determine the price. If there is too much oil, the price drops. If there isn’t enough, the price goes up. Also, the price is determined by people’s thinking about what will happen. For example, if people think a war or something bad might happen between countries, the price will shoot up.
