(三) 閱讀測驗(每題 2 分, 16%)

(1) We all know how important it is to take care of your body so that you feel well. Eating healthy foods, exercising and treating illness are all necessary to stay healthy.

However, not many people know how much bad thoughts and feelings can affect your body as well. Sad events can cause stomachaches, headaches and tiredness. Have you ever noticed that you don't feel very well in times of stress, just like before a big exam, after a fight with someone, or after an unhappy experience? You may not want to eat, or you may eat a lot of unhealth things. You may feel tired, forget things or be unable to think clearly. When we feel angry, our hearts beat faster and our bodies have to spend a lot of energy cooling us down. In fact, people say that a lot of people go to the doctor because they have emotional problems, not problems with their bodies. Now we know that, to feel our best, it is really important to take care of not only our bodies, but also our thoughts and emotions. -by 齊斌

(3) Dr. Hanks was a clinical psychologist. One evening, a man came to his clinic, saying he had been unable to sleep well for more than two weeks. Dr. Hanks decided that the man should receive special treatment. He said to him, "Now, Mr. Stanley, close your eyes. When I count to three, you'll fall asleep" Magically, the man did fall asleep as Dr. Hanks stopped at three.

"Good," said Dr. Hanks. "And imagine you are communicating with me wirelessly in your dream."
 "OK, doc," said the man in his sleep.

"Now, do everything as I tell you in our wireless sleep communication. Raise your hands. Relax. Put them down. Smile." The man did everything that Dr. Hanks told him to do.

"Very well. Now wake up," said Dr. Hanks. "Come back and see me every day."

A week later, the man felt much better. Dr. Hanks was pleased and sent a bill to his house. Somehow, two months passed and the man still did not pay the bill. Dr. Hanks thought maybe he should phone his patient.

"So, Mr. Stanley, you said you feel completely OK now, right?" asked the doctor.

"Couldn't be better, doc. Your wireless sleeping treatment worked like magic," said the patient.

"Great. But I'm very sorry to have to tell you that you have not yet paid your bill."

"It couldn't be. I paid it by check in our wireless sleep communication last Saturday evening. You do remember, don't you?"

"I guess so, Mr. Stanley," said the doctor in a peaceful tone. "It is just that you forgot to sign your name then. Now, could you make out a new check to me, please?"

(4) Peter was not very good at math. He could not understand the teacher's explanations. Even when the teacher explained something a second time, Peter still could not understand it.

"That's easy," Peter told himself. "I'm quite good at other subjects. I'll cheat in the math exam, and nobody will know it." "I'll sit next to the boy who's best at math," he thought, "and copy down his answers."

The day of the exam came, and Peter sat next to Cody, who was always at the top of the class in math. Peter carefully copied Cody's answers onto his own exam paper.

At the end of the exam, the teacher collected the papers and graded them. Then she said, "Well, boys and girls, I've decided to give a prize to the student who got the highest grade. It's difficult for me to decide who to give the prize to, however, because two students, Peter and Cody, got the same grade."

"Let them share it," one of the other students said.

"I've thought about that," the teacher said, "but I've decided to give the prize to Cody."

Peter was angry when he heard this. He stood up and said, "That's not fair. I got the same grade as Cody." "That's true," the teacher said. "However, Cody's answer to question 18 was 'I don't know.' Yours was 'Neither do I.'"
