The marathon is quite popular in recent years. We know the marathon is a long-distance running race of 42.195 kilometers(26.219 miles). A lot of people join all kinds of marathons every year, but few of them know how marathon got its name. In fact, the name came from the legend of a Greek messenger, Pheidippides. He was said to have run all the way from Marathon to Athens to report the victory in the Battle of Marathon in 490 B.C. He died after that.

The marathon became one of Olympic events in 1892, but the event was only for men at that time. The first winner was Spyridon Louis, a Greek water-carrier. He spent two hours fifty-eight minutes and fifty seconds finishing his running. The marathon for women was first held in 1984, and the first winner was an American, Joan Benoit. It took her two hours twenty-four minutes and fifty-two seconds to finish her running.

According to the IAAF, the following man and woman are the top fastest (updated October 2021).

My life has not been easy.
 Hard times you’ve seen me share.
 When I had troubles or worries,
 You were always standing there.

You lent an ear, and gave a hand.
 My problems you listened,
 My dreams you supported.
 And always seemed to understand.

At times, when I was weak,
 And could not bear the stress,
 You always gave your all to me
 Never any less.

To you, I’ve got something to say,
 For all that we have shared,
 For showing that you cared.
 So many thanks for always being there.
